

School Visits and Our New Truck

One of the benefits of being a police officer is being able to visit daycares, schools and youth organizations.

Over the past few months, Tribal Police members have visited T'it'q'et Daycare, Sk'il Mountain Community School, Head of the Lake School and Brownies.

Constable Leonard Isaac recently visited T'it'q'et Daycare. He read books, had tea, and answered several questions. He is pictured with children from the daycare and their teacher, Connie Konkin.

The children got a tour of the police truck, including demonstrations of the emergency lights and siren. They even got to talk to someone on the police radio. It was an enjoyable time for all involved.

Another perk for Tribal Police is being able to drive around in sweet vehicles. We've recently updated the emblems on our vehicles and you may have spotted them in your area. Constable Deborah Doss-Cody proudly shows off our Toyota Tundra.
